

CONTRIBUTORS

Linda Kinsey Adams has a master's degree in English from Texas Tech University and is currently studying oral narrative at the Folklore Institute, Indiana University.

Hermann Bausinger is professor of Empirische Kulturwissenschaft (empirical culture research) at the University of Tübingen, West Germany. He has published books and articles on folklore, especially in its modern transformations.

Regina Bendix holds a Ph.D. in Folklore from Indiana University. She currently works as an Adjunct Professor at Lewis and Clark College and Marylhurst College in Portland, OR.

Mary Dart is a second year graduate student in Folklore at Indiana University, specializing in Ethnomusicology with a particular interest in Scandinavian music and dance.

Kate Dunlay recently completed her M.A. in Folklore at Indiana University and currently resides in Toronto.

Donald Haase is an Associate Professor of German at Wayne State University. He has published on Märchen by writers of the 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries.

Laura Arntson Harris is a Ph.D. candidate in Folklore with a concentration in Ethnomusicology at Indiana University. She is currently studying Mandingo balanji ensemble performance in Sierra Leone.

Cyndee Johnson is in her second year in the Ph.D. program at the Folklore Institute, Indiana University.

Sabina Magliocco recently completed her Ph.D. at the Folklore Institute, Indiana University.

Kenneth D. Pimple recently passed his Ph.D. exams at the Folklore Institute. He has taught freshman composition and Introduction to Folklore and is currently teaching a course on witchcraft.

Caroline Scielzo is professor and coordinator of Russian Area Studies at Montclair State College in New Jersey.

Moirra Smith is a Ph.D. candidate in the Indiana University Folklore Institute, where she is writing about practical joke praxis and festival license in New Zealand.

Mary Beth Stein is a Ph.D. candidate in the Folklore Institute at Indiana University. She is currently in Berlin, West Germany, doing fieldwork for her dissertation on the Berlin Wall.

Rory P. B. Turner hopes you will be inspired to read Nights at the Circus. He is currently completing his master's thesis on Civil War reenactments at the Folklore Institute, Indiana University.

John B. Wolford is a Ph.D. candidate in the Folklore Institute, Indiana University.

Egle Victoria Žygas is Assistant Deputy Director, Office of Local Partnership, at the Illinois Arts Council.